

George William Maudlin

George William Maudlin served as a Private (16273) in the 1st Battalion, Northamptonshire Regiment. He enlisted in Kettering in November 1914. He was born in Bedford but was resident in Corby.

At the outbreak of war the 1st Battalion was stationed in the United Kingdom as part of the 2nd Brigade of the 1st Division. The battalion mobilised on 13th August 1914 landing at Le Havre. It was to serve on the Western Front for the duration of the War.

Private Maudlin embarked for France in February 1915.

Private Maudlin was killed on 9th May 1915 at the Battle of Aubers. Four other soldiers from the Borough serving in the Northamptonshire Regiment died that day; two others from Corby, one from Weldon, one from Gretton.

The Grantham Journal of 12th June 1915 reported:-

Missing Northants Men

"...Pte. Geo. Maudlin a married man with three children, and who also joined the Army in November was drafted to the 1st Northamptons in France during February. Letters had come to hand regularly twice weekly until lately...his last letter which reached home bore the date May 8th wherein he stated they were preparing for a big battle".

Private George William Maudlin is remembered on the Corby War Memorial and the Le Touret Memorial.

Le Touret Memorial

The Le Touret Memorial commemorates over 13,400 British soldiers who were killed in this sector of the Western Front from the beginning of October 1914 to the eve of the Battle of Loos in late September 1915 and who have no known grave. The Memorial takes the form of a loggia surrounding an open rectangular court. The names of those commemorated are listed on panels set into the walls of the court and the gallery, arranged by regiment, rank and alphabetically by surname within the rank. The memorial was designed by John Reginald Truelove, who had served as an officer with the London Regiment during the war, and unveiled by the British ambassador to France, Lord Tyrrell, on 22 March 1930.

Almost all of the men commemorated on the Memorial served with regular or territorial regiments from across the United Kingdom and were killed in actions that took place along a section of the front line that stretched from Estaires in the north to Grenay in the south. This part of the Western Front was the scene of some of the heaviest fighting of the first year of the war, including the battles of La Bassée (10 October – 2 November 1914), Neuve Chapelle (10 – 12 March 1915), Aubers Ridge (9 – 10 May 1915), and Festubert (15 – 25 May 1915). Soldiers serving with Indian and Canadian units who were killed in this sector in 1914 and '15 whose remains were never identified are commemorated on the Neuve Chapelle and Vimy memorials, while those who fell during the northern pincer attack at the Battle of Aubers Ridge are commemorated on the Ploegsteert Memorial.

The British Expeditionary Force in French Flanders, 1914 - 1915-

In October 1914, II Corps of the British Expeditionary Force moved north from Picardy and took up positions in French Flanders where they were immediately engaged in the series of attacks and counter attacks that would become known as the 'race to the sea'. Over the course of the next year most of the British activity in this sector focused on attempting to dislodge the German forces from their advantageous position on the Aubers Ridge and capture the city of Lille, a major industrial and transport centre which the Germans had occupied early in the war. The ridge is a slight incline in an otherwise extremely flat landscape from which the Germans were able to observe and bombard the British lines. Following the British capture of the village of Neuve Chapelle in March 1915, the Germans greatly strengthened their defences along the ridge, reinforcing their positions with thick barbed wire entanglements, concrete blockhouses and machine gun emplacements. These extra defences frustrated British attempts to break through enemy lines and led to very heavy casualties at the battles of Aubers Ridge and Festubert in May 1915.

Le Touret Military Cemetery-

The men of the Indian Corps began burying their fallen comrades at this site in November 1914 and the cemetery was used continually by field ambulances and fighting units until the German spring offensive began in March 1918. Richebourg L'Avoue was overrun by the German forces in April 1918, but the cemetery was used again in September and October after this territory was recaptured by the Allies. Today over 900 Commonwealth servicemen who were killed during the First World War are buried here.
